Dr. Michael Nehls: Both COVID-19 and COVID vaccines are an assault on the HUMAN MIND

According to molecular geneticist Dr. Michael Nehls, both the Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19) pathogen and the vaccine against it are an assault on the human mind.

The German scientist shared this sentiment during an interview with Tucker Carlson on the latter's Tucker Carlson Network (TCN).

According to Nehls, the SARS-CoV-2 spike protein present in both the virus and the COVID-19 injection "is a bioweapon against the brain."

The spike protein, Nehls continued, attacks what he called "the mental immune system" – the part of the brain that makes humanity human.

"So the spike protein essentially attacked humankind, the very basis of humans. If you really want to attack the brain, you have to get the spike protein into the brain. That's the [part] that's really dangerous," he told the former Fox News host.

Nehls also mentioned that he realized the true reason why governments were adamant in pushing the COVID-19 injection to their population while writing his book "The Indoctrinated Brain."

"It's not about health. It's not ... even money. It's about conquering the human mind. That is, really, to undermine the human ability to think."

Carlson replied: "If intentional, this would be the most evil thing ever done," something his guest agreed with.

Nehls also pointed out that "people who are not interested in really thinking were the ones who actually took the shots very quickly." True enough, the refusal to think critically came with a heavy price. Many of those injected with the COVID-19 vaccine suffered from serious vaccine damage such as turbo cancers and autoimmune disorders, if not dying suddenly.

Ultimately, the molecular geneticist referenced Klaus Schwab of the World Economic Forum and his espousal of the Great Reset – which coincided with the COVID-19 pandemic. "The Great Reset ... is not something we would welcome if we were in healthy state mentally," he told Carlson.

Investigative journalist experienced firsthand the mental impact of COVID-19

Investigative journalist and author John Leake also put in his two cents about Nehls' interview on TCN. "Without question, it is the most stunning interview I have ever seen," he wrote on his Substack.

"When I watched the interview with Nehls, I was primed to be perfectly awestruck by his observations and findings. With astonishing clarity, [he] enumerates all of the ways in which our ability to think is being assaulted on a daily basis."

Leake also shared his personal bout with COVID-19 infection and how Nehls' points resonated with him. The author contracted COVID-19 in June 2022, describing his primary symptoms as "a general feeling of malaise that reminded me of a nasty hangover and extreme fatigue."

He then treated it using the McCullough Protocol pioneered by cardiologist Dr. Peter McCullough, and was able to perform his normal activities on the third day – including a long walk. According to Leake, while his COVID-19 infection resembled severe colds he had in the past, it was "utterly unique" in the way that it affected his emotional state. The true crime author had a general feeling of depression and gloomy thoughts, leading him to ask McCullough about his concern.

"I fear it's what we call neuroinflammation," the cardiologist explained. "The spike protein causes an inflammatory immune response that affects the brain, and autopsy studies have even found the spike in the brain."

McCullough continued that this was another problem with the COVID-19 injections, which induce the body to produce excess spike protein for a long period. To make matters worse, people injected with the vaccine – which also contains SARS-CoV-2 spike protein – still got infected by the virus, often repeatedly. This combination of infections and injections exposes the body, including the brain, to the toxic spike protein.

From what I can gather, the controversies surrounding Dr. Nehls' book, The Indoctrinated Brain, exemplifies the tension between fringe theories and established scientific and medical consensus. The book challenges valid public health communication and the fight

Shake it off with tDCS and tACS, whoever listens, feel better. Or keep taking useless Z-Stack vitamin cocktails. It's true that the main target is the brain (the second one as well, look up Mike Adams on that one), you can easily set yourself free and giggle at
